Time-wasting (speed drawing) video: Writing step by step video tutorial: For the first few steps, don't press too hard with your pencil. Use light, smooth stroke to start. Step 1: Draw two circles as a guide to the first part of the body of the tiger. First draw four small marks for the height and width of the circle, then contact the mark using the curved lines. Circles don't have to be perfect. They're just directing. If you have a perfect circle So, please tress the outer rim of a skaka, bottle hat or some more circular. There are out-of-the-box sacrix essays when they run, so keep the body away from the other circle for a long time already. second circle Be even smaller than before. Leave enough room for the sides and bottom for the head and legs. Step 2: Fear another circle on the left as a guide to the head of the tiger. This circle should be small. Fear it about a third size of the first circle. It is not a very far place from the first circle, otherwise the neck of the tiger will be too long. Step 3: Shave an angle line to the left of the head as a guide to the spout patch. As well as this, the shape behind it should not remain too much on the left side. It should be very flat. Step 4: Draw a small arc on the top of the head of the tiger as a guide to the ear. On the other hand, add a curved line to the left of the arc for the ear. Step 5: Draw two angle lines (under each circle) as directed to the legs that are on this side of the body. The line on the left should be like z letter ing towards it. The right side should angle the line as it comes out once, then pull back very straight. The syllable is long limbs, so these instructions also scare long. Very.
